FAQ'S //

Do I need to provide samples of work to support my application for the Film & Television Production course?

No, you do not need to provide any samples of work to be eligible. However, you are welcome to provide samples of work. Any scripts you've written, youtube clips, short films, storyboards you've drawn, visual and written ideas for films or tv shows, and any technical experience you may have had either in school, via extracurricular activities, work experience or volunteer work are all great!

When can I start using the cameras and equipment in the Film & Television Production course?

You'll start learning the proper way to handle the film gear in your first Trimester. Students are then assessed on their competency for handling the equipment. Once this is undertaken, students are able to loan cameras and equipment suitable for their on campus or on location shoots, projects and assessments.

What kind of assessments will I do in the Film & Television Production course?

You will do a range of assessments that will demonstrate your understanding, including short film making, documentaries, television commercials, music videos, live broadcasts and multi-cam, pitches and presentations, sound recording, film analysis and screenplays. At the end of the Bachelor there is project based work where you'll be able to choose your main assessment, which could be any of the above.

Are JMC courses available to study online?

No, our courses are hands on and practical. Students are required to attend classes to receive ongoing mentorship, learn new skills and work with the equipment provided. We do encourage our students to use online study resources, however our courses would not be as immersive as they are without the practical component.

What equipment and knowledge will I need for the Film & Television Production course?

You will not need to purchase your own computer or any film gear as we have fully equipped editing suites and an equipment loan service with quality mics, lighting, cameras and a myriad of accessories available for student use.

I want to be a film maker and am not as interested in television. Is the Film & Television Production course the right course for me?

Although you may want to be a film maker, it is important to have a wide range of skills when entering the industry. You will still learn about film making in great detail, however this course will provide you with a greater range of career options upon graduation. The skills learnt may be applied to film as well as television production.

I have never used film equipment. Will I still be able to do well in the Film & Television Production course?

Absolutely. You do not need to have had any experience with film equipment as we cater to all levels of experience.

Is a JMC Academy degree of equal standing/value to a university degree?

Yes. The JMC Academy is registered and regulated by the Tertiary Education Quality and Standards Agency (TEQSA) which is Australia's independent national regulator of the higher education sector, both public and private.
